Rosanne Bornhold

As a young farm girl living in central Pennsylvania my aunt took me for walks in the mountains behind our farm and taught me the names of the woodland wildflowers. After college I lived in and traveled extensively through Europe, returning to the United States in the late 1970's.

After settling in southern New Jersey, I became nostalgic for the wide open spaces where I could follow my wanderlust as I did as a child. I discovered the New Jersey Pine Barrens. The "pines" became my refuge - for its peaceful moments, piney smells, open skies and vistas.

My husband I got involved with various groups that were dedicated to preserving the Pinelands. Before I knew it, my passion for botany created a new interest, photography.

Photography and botany are my hobbies; the New Jersey Pine Barrens is my passion!

Ann-Marie Woods

Ann-Marie Woods is an Ocean County native who is a self-taught photographer specializing in the New Jersey Pinelands. She attended the Pratt Institute and Stockton State College for fine art instruction.

Ann-Marie gave a presentation at the 2013 Pinelands Short Course, and was a featured artist there in 2010. Recent photography shows include the 2012 Raw Juried Photography Show at the Noyes Museum in Hammonton, and two 2013 exhibits with the Pinelands Photography Group.

During the last 16 years of photographing in the Pinelands, Ann-Marie has appeared at area festivals and events, has participated in solo and group exhibits, and has given presentations about the Pinelands and her photography. She has been featured in several area newspapers.
