The New Jersey Pinelands...

...includes portions of seven southern New Jersey counties, and encompasses over one-million acres of farms, forests and wetlands. It contains 56 communities, with over 700,000 permanent residents. In 1978 it was established by Congress as the country's first National Reserve -- a Reserve being an area of nationally significant resources that are protected through a program of local land use management supported by federal financial and technical assistance.

In the Pinelands, specific areas have been designated for environmental protection, forestry and agriculture, with growth being directed and encouraged in and around areas capable of accommodating further development.

The Pinelands is truly a special place. Its people are distinguished by a unique relationship with their environment, and the environment is distinguished by being habitat for over a thousand species of plants and animals--almost 100 of which are threatened or endangered.

Pinelands Preservation Alliance...

...is a non-profit environmental organization

Our goals:

Preserve the Pine Barrens ecosystem, its plants and wildlife, its water, and its landscape throughout the Pinelands National Reserve.

Promote wide public awareness of the values of Pinelands resources and issues involved in their preservation.

Advance permanent acquisition of land and development rights by private and public conservation agencies.

Designing a Sustainable Community

Pinelands Preservation Alliance (PPA) is pleased to offer a FREE 90-minute presentation on sustainable community design to Pinelands municipalities.

The purpose of this program is to provide Pinelands municipal officials, board members and decision-makers with a comprehensive overview of sound community design techniques that can be implemented in the Pinelands.

The presentation will cover topics such as: mixed-use centers and walkable/bikeable neighborhoods; energy conservation measures and alternative energy solutions; green building; water quality and conservation; stormwater management; protecting open space and natural resources; historic preservation; transit-oriented development, and the Sustainable Jersey program.

A key component for the future of Pinelands preservation will be fostering, designing and implementing sustainable development in Pinelands centers, towns, and regional growth areas.

Sustainable community development not only benefits the environment, but also is economical and promotes a healthier and safer community. As many communities get closer to build-out, the community that incorporates the design principles of sustainable development will be much more appealing for decades to come.

Please take this opportunity to find out what options are available to your community and request a presentation today!
