BETTY WILSON, LONGTIME PINELANDS ADVOCATE, APPOINTED CHAIR OF PINELANDS COMMISSION

Betty Wilson, Chair, NJ Pinelands Commission

"I love the Pinelands and I think preserving it is one of the most outstanding achievements in the State in the twentieth century."

Last month, Acting Governor Richard Codey appointed Betty Wilson as Chair of the Pinelands Commission. Ms. Wilson succeeds former Governor Jim Florio, who served as Chair for 3 years before retiring from the Commission at the end of his term. She kindly agreed to give this interview to PPA's Carleton Montgomery at the start of her term as Chair of the state agency on which the public most heavily relies to protect the Pinelands.

Carleton Montgomery: Why have you agreed to Chair the Pinelands Commission?

Betty Wilson: The opportunity to chair the Pinelands Commission is one that I never expected to have and I am deeply grateful to all those who advanced my name and endorsed me for the position. This appointment affords me a chance to apply what I have learned in three decades of public life about policy formulation and leadership to an area of the state that my family and I have known and loved for many years. I hold the executive director and staff of the Pinelands Commission in high esteem and know that success as a Commission Chair depends on our talented, skilled and hard working staff.

CM: What is your prior experience relating to the Pinelands?

BW: My work in the Pinelands began when I was at NJDEP. Under four Commissioners — Bardin, Ricci, O'Hern and English—as Assistant Commissioner for Regional Projects and then First Deputy Commissioner I became the Department's point person on the Pinelands. The Department's initiatives followed the priorities of Governor Byrne. We accelerated land acquisition and made maximum use of the regulatory authority of DEP to protect the area. I represented DEP on a panel that prepared one of the reports on which the legislation was based. In the immediate aftermath of Governor Byrne's moratorium on building in the Pinelands, Commissioner O'Hern and I set up an ad hoc review board (comprised of representatives of the Department of Community Affairs and the Department of Agriculture and chaired by me, the representative of DEP) to receive requests for relief from the moratorium. The body worked for six months or more until the state legislation was approved and the Commission was organized. I might note here that we normally granted relief to individuals and denied it to large developments, resting on the principle of doing "as little harm as possible." I worked along with hosts of others in winning passage of the federal and state legislation.

In the ensuing years I worked under contract with the NJ Conservation Foundation to organize an advocacy group for the Pinelands. That work resulted in the formation of the Pinelands Preservation Alliance (PPA). I joined the first Board of Trustees of PPA and returned to the Board in the mid 1990's where I served until my appointment to the Pinelands Commission.

CM: How do you see your prior experience preparing you to Chair the Pinelands Commission?

BW: In many ways, it could be said that everything that I did in both the public and private sectors prepared me for the work of Pinelands Chair. First, I love the Pinelands and I think preserving it is one of the most outstand-

We at PPA are letting ourselves take some pride in the appointment of Betty Wilson as the sixth Chair of the Pinelands Commission by Acting Governor Codey. Ms. Wilson is a founder of PPA and served on our Board of Trustees, until she was appointed to the Pinelands Commission by then-Governor McGreevey. I think this appointment reflects not only on Betty Wilson (and Governor Codey), but also on PPA and the stature this organization has achieved through 16 years of high quality work as advocates for Pinelands conservation.

The Chair of the Pinelands Commission is a particularly important position. While all 15 Commissioners have an equal vote, the Chair runs the meetings and, working with the Commission staff, sets the agenda. The Chair is also the primary point of contact for communicating with the Governor, the Commissioner of DEP, the Legislature and the heads of other agencies whose work affects the Pinelands. In all these ways, the Chair is the leader of the Commission.

Betty Wilson brings many qualifications to the job. She was a state Assemblywoman in the early 1970s. Among other state government jobs, Ms. Wilson was First Deputy commissioner of the Department of Environmental Protection when the Pinelands Protection Act was passed, the Pinelands Commission was formed and the Pinelands Comprehensive Management Plan was created.

For me, though, it was her work with PPA that speaks most clearly of Betty Wilson's commitment to the Pinelands.

EMPTY INK JET CARTRIDGES WANTED!

PPA is accepting used/empty ink-jet cartridges. We are now members of the Empties 4 Cash program. We submit the cartridges for up to $4/cartridge, to be put towards our various outreach programs.

This is a great opportunity to recycle your cartridges and help PPA raise funds.

Please note: Empties 4Cash does not accept Epson, Laser Toners or Canon BCI cartridges.

What you can do:

1. Most of us have inkjet printers at home or work. Next time when you have an empty cartridge, don't throw it away.
2. Just put it in a Ziploc bag or the original cartridge box and bring it to our office or mail them attention Jaelyn Rhoads.

ing achievements in the State in the twentieth century. I was honored to be part of the work to preserve it that benefited from the leadership of Governor Byrne, Congressman Florio, and Senators Williams and Case. Preservation grew from the powerful combination of private citizens and non-governmental organizations, mobilizing to win action from a government that was ready, willing and able. There aren't many times in a lifetime when all those forces come together for the greater good.

My education in the social sciences, my work as a public school teacher, my service as an elected official at the local and state level, my work at the DEP and the US Department of the Interior, and my experience as the founding president of the Center for Non-Profit Corporations have prepared me with both the commitment in values and the practical experience required to do the job.

CM: What do you see as the most important threats facing the Pinelands today?

BW: New Jersey's density of population and continued demand for new development will continue to threaten the Pinelands. The area encompasses over twenty percent of the State. It should not surprise us that the pressures for development will only increase. The related concern of threats to the water, the flora and fauna and the natural areas must be foremost in our minds as we move forward.

CM: What are some of your priorities for the Pinelands Commission in the next few years?

BW: I am fortunate to succeed Governor Florio as chair of the Pinelands Commission. Under his leadership the Commission has been stabilized and strengthened both financially and in its leadership. It is my hope that during the next few years, we can build upon those strengths to make strides in subregional planning, protecting the water through completion of the Kirkwood-Cohansey Study and increasing the amount of land that is permanently protected through acquisition and techniques such as the Pinelands Development Credits (PDC) program. I am enthusiastic about our potential to assist local officials and residents to plan for livable communities.

CM: What do you think are the most important achievements of the Pinelands Protection Act so far?

BW: Without the Pinelands Protection Act there would be no Pinelands as we know it. Of that I am certain. We might have an airport and all the ancillary development that goes with it or some other types of over-development. I believe that the vast expanses of preserved area as well as the farms and villages would be things of the past. The Pinelands Protection Act and everything that followed — the Commission and its leadership and staff, the Comprehensive Management Plan and regulatory work, the cooperation and participation of local governments — would not have happened without the Act.

CM: Do you think the Pinelands Commission should work with other agencies on some of the environmental issues—like depletion of aquifers—that come from outside the Pinelands boundary?

BW: Yes. Water knows no political or other artificial boundaries. As with so many other issues — environmental and otherwise — society needs a collaboration of agencies — non-governmental organizations, interest groups and individuals — to support a civil society.

CM: What roles do you think PPA should play in protecting the Pinelands?

BW: PPA is the only organization in the state that is devoted solely to protection of the Pinelands. Therefore, PPA is the appropriate entity to lead an alliance of all interested groups and citizens to be the watchdog for the protection of the Pinelands. PPA is needed to push from the outside for preservation and conservation concerns and issues.

6th Annual Summer Teacher Institute

PPA hosted 23 middle school and high school teachers for a week in July, serving up the finest agenda of Pine Barrens experts in ecology, history, water, conservation and other topics. We also took the teachers out in the field, canoeing the Batsto River, sampling water quality around the region, and visiting several ghost towns. Feedback was very positive ("This was the BEST workshop I have ever attended in my 15 years of teaching!"), and we look forward to having a wonderful group of teachers again next year!

During the weekend of June 11th PPA took to the airwaves to raise awareness worldwide of the significance of the signing of the Pinelands Protection Act 26 years ago. PPA broadcasted from the Bishop Farmstead on the amateur radio bands that are used throughout the world by thousands of amateur radio enthusiasts. We operated what the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) calls a "special events station." Our call sign was not WPPA, but W2W. Special event stations promote specific events of significance to the public. The creation of the New Jersey Pinelands 26 years ago was certainly a significant event.

Rich at the microphone

The way a special event station works is that you broadcast a brief message of what you are celebrating over the airwaves. In our case it was the 26th anniversary of the signing of the Pinelands Protection Act. Anyone that heard the message, and was interested in learning more, then called back. And boy did they!

The event was a huge success. All total we were on the air approximately 25 hours and spoke to 352 people from around the world. We averaged one conversation every 4.5 minutes. In addition, there were many people that just listened to learn about the message and never called back. So in actuality, the number of people that now know about the Pinelands is much more. In the United States we spoke to people from 38 states, as far away as Washington State and California. We reached deep into Europe, making contact with people from seventeen (17) countries. These included: Austria, Bulgaria, Ireland, Portugal, Scotland, Italy, France, Germany, Sweden, and the Netherlands to name just a few. We also spoke to people from Bermuda, Brazil, Trinidad, Turks Island, Puerto Rico, and Barbados. In Canada, the provinces of Ontario, Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia checked in. During our conversations they would be sent to the PPA website for additional information on the Pinelands.

Every conversation was important, but some were truly special. For example, our conversations with: Bob from Florida, who is 91 years old, blind, and restricted to a wheelchair; Paulo, who before moving to Portugal 15 years ago, as a truck driver enjoyed driving through the Pinelands; Gary, who called from a boat in the middle of Lake Superior; and Eric, who was proud of the fact that he lived in a "preservation area" in Exmoor National Park in Luccombe, England. Not to mention being able to tell the Cub Scouts and Sea Scouts aboard the USS Kidd, a retired Navy destroyer in Louisiana, all about the Pinelands!

The message that made the whole weekend worthwhile came in an e-mail that we received from Vic from Mississippi first thing Monday morning: "Sorry I missed you! I listened to you all day on Sunday while I was working to get my new antenna up. You were gone when I was through. I have many happy memories of canoeing down the Wading River and camping at Godfrey's Bridge. I was homesick when I heard your station. Been down here 21 years (from Audubon), and although we have pine trees and streams, it just doesn't compare. Keep up the good work. Anyone who's spent anytime in the Pine Barrens knows what there is to lose."

TO OUR SPRING & SUMMER INTERNS: THANKS!

Each year October is proclaimed as Pinelands Month in the state of New Jersey. This year the Pinelands Preservation Alliance is celebrating the 10th year of hosting the gateway event to begin the fall festival season in the Pinelands. The festival, in addition to marking an important milestone, has a new name. Pinelands Discovery Festival encourages a day of discovery and environmental awareness, while providing a microcosm of the Pinelands experience. Held at Historic Whitesbog Village in Browns Mills, Burlington County, on Sunday, October 2, the event runs from 10am to 4pm. A parking fee of $5.00 per vehicle will be charged. All events at the festival are free.

The day will include the noontime release of a rehabilitated wild hawk, tractor driven tours, presenters on a wide range of pinelands subjects, sounds provided by icons in the pine barrens music community, children's activities, great food, and exhibits that offer a wealth of information. Janet Jackson Gould of Bear's Meadow Farms will conduct wagon rides pulled by her Clydesdales.

The presentation schedule will include historian Tim Hart's discussion on War At The Shore-Revolution in the Pines. Russell Juerg, author and PPA naturalist, will give an overview of the rare and endangered Pinelands native plant species. Author Barbara Solem Stull will give a presentation on the Ghost Towns of the Pines.

Historic Whitesbog is the site of the first cultivated blueberry. The surrounding bogs and forest provide an opportunity to view a pinelands ecosystem. Tours will include cranberry bog tours, historic tours of Whitesbog Village, and ecology walks led by naturalists. Tours will continue throughout the day.

A wide variety of exhibitors, artists, nature photographers, and interactive displays will be showcased, all featuring the different facets and crafts of the Pinelands. Many of the region's environmental organizations will be on hand, as will volunteers and staff from state parks and other points of interest. Information and pamphlets will be available for festival-goers to collect as a resource.

The Bog Trotter's Run, a 5K run through the bogs of Whitesbog, will occur prior to the start of the festival. The Tour de Pines, a 1 to 5-day volunteer bicycle ride celebrating the importance of the Pinelands, will arrive at Whitesbog on the afternoon of the festival.

Discover something new about the New Jersey Pinelands! Come join us on our laid back, fun, and informative day.

PPA has benefitted from hundreds of hours of our volunteers' time to help create and maintain a variety of garden landscapes at the Bishop Farmstead. The fruits of their labor are evident everywhere this summer!

The Native Plant Garden

PPA volunteers are making great progress creating the Bishop Farmstead Native Plant Garden. Since many of these plants have not been routinely cultivated in formal gardens, volunteers started by researching key facts about each species: moisture and sunlight requirements, soil preference, size, width, and growth habit.

Ox Eye Sunflowers in the native plant garden

PPA's native plant garden is envisioned as more than just an attractive landscape. It's an educational tool. These are all native plants that grow in and around the Pine Barrens. Each bed has a theme. We have an Aster bed, a Fern bed, and a Goldenrod & Boneset bed, for example.

Though many gardeners and landscapers are pre-disposed toward non-natives, they often become nuisance plants, displacing our distinctive native communities. In the Pinelands especially, non-natives usually require soil amendments that do harm beyond the area treated. Our native plant garden demonstrates that natives deserve to be protected and cultivated.

Our native plant garden is innovative and experimental, and we plan to use some interesting and beautiful species that aren't yet easy to get from suppliers. But with partners such as Pinelands Nursery, A Wild Bird Oasis, and our volunteers, we're on the way to expanding the inventory of commercially available Pinelands natives.

The Parlor Garden

The garden immediately in the front of the farmhouse represents a typical 1800's Parlor Garden. You will find shrubs and flowers appropriate to that era here, including Phlox, Cleome, Artemisia, and Lamb's Ear. The rectangular layout of our garden, with box and yew hedges, is common to a parlor garden. These gardens usually have a central axis and typically run the width of the house with a depth two thirds that distance.

The Kitchen Garden

Beginning in April, volunteers from the Burlington County Master Gardeners program have been working to create a kitchen garden on the property. A hallmark of American gardening, the kitchen garden contains anything that residents of the house may find useful, including vegetables, herbs, cut flowers and shrubbery. The most outstanding characteristic feature of the kitchen garden is its abundance. In the traditional kitchen garden every available space is used, with nothing going to waste.

The kitchen garden at PPA is one of a number of gardens throughout Burlington County designated as a Master Gardener project by Rutgers Cooperative Extension, under whose auspices the Master Gardener program falls.

Although the garden is still in its beginning stages, the Master Gardeners working on the project believe that in time it will become a valuable and beautiful addition to PPA.

PPA wishes to extend its warmest thanks to the following volunteers for their efforts in the Bishop Farmstead gardens: Pat Bogue, Nancy Buchanan, Susan Dowling, Kay Fanning, Marilyn Hartford, Judy Janas, Joan Johnson, Jessie Kuhn, Perry Krakora, Michelle McClean and Candy Myers.

If you wish to volunteer for the garden efforts at the Bishop Farmstead, please contact Mike Pippin at (609) 859-8860 x15 or mike@pinelandsalliance.org
